2 (Case called)

3 MR. TYRRELL: Good morning, your Honor.

4 James Tyrrell, for the plaintiffs, from Venable.

5 THE COURT: Good morning.

6 THE LAW CLERK: Defense counsel, please stand and note 7 your appearance.

8 MR. FARBER: Good morning, your Honor.

9 Seth Farber of the Office of Attorney General Letitia 10 James. With me is Daniel Basuk, our summer intern.

11 THE COURT: And I assume Mr. Basuk will be doing all 12 the speaking today?

13 MR. FARBER: Oh, God willing, your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Good morning to both of you.

15 Good morning to counsel.

16 MR. FARBER: Good morning, your Honor.

17 MR. TYRRELL: Good morning.

18 THE COURT: All right.

19 I have looked at and reviewed all of your filings.
20 I'm happy to permit plaintiff to use its portion of this 21 morning as you see fit. I don't think I need any kind of 22 regurgitation of what I've read, but I'm happy to give you an 23 opportunity. I wanted to give everybody an opportunity to 24 offer whatever additional argument, proof, etc., they wanted 25 before I consider what to do.

K7RVEISO

1 So, Mr. Tyrrell, it's your show. I'm happy to listen.
2 Tell me what you want me to do next, besides sign your motion.

3 MR. TYRRELL: Thank you, your Honor.

4 Thanks to the Court for facilitating this remote 5 appearance today. My family is very happy we didn't have to 6 cancel vacation.

7 THE COURT: And I'm happy you didn't have to cancel 8 vacation as well.

9 MR. TYRRELL: Your Honor, I don't want to waste the 10 Court's time and regurgitate what we've already expressed in 11 the papers. But I will just say that the governor's executive 12 order and the current requirements for plaintiffs, the 13 executive order 2.2, 202.46, it creates a severe burden on 14 plaintiffs. And sending out people and circulators and 15 candidates to go gather in-person wet signatures with in-person 16 witnesses in the middle of a pandemic, no matter the rosy 17 picture that the defendants have painted, it simply does not -- 18 it's a severe burden on plaintiff. And when the governor and 19 local and state authorities, all they are saying every single 20 day is to social distance, social distance, six feet away, it 21 strains credulity to have the governor go out and require 22 individuals to go get signatures, when doing that violates 23 those very directives.

24 Your Honor, I can go through -- I'm not going to go 25 through and regurgitate everything, but one thing I will say

K7RVEISO

1 with respect to our equal protection claim, we did a little bit 2 of math with respect to the -- and the times provided. And I
3 will say the following with respect to our equal protection 4 claim:

5 For major party candidates for the primary, there was 6 a 12 percent reduction in the days to collect signatures; 7 whereas there was a 70 percent reduction in the amount of 8 signatures required. During this period of time, your Honor, 9 the state was not on lockdown for any portion of that signature 10 collection. The lockdown started on March 22nd. And there was 11 no social distancing mandate until March 20th, under New York's 12 10-point plan. So all of the period of time that major party 13 candidates had to gather their signatures was not restricted, 14 even though it was kind of ramping up into being a kind of 15 scary situation.

16 For independent candidates, on the other hand, there 17 was a 30 percent reduction in the days to collect, and a 30 18 percent reduction in signatures. The executive order, 202.46, 19 opened the signature collection period on July 1st. The 20 executive order was issued the night before, on June 30th. No 21 opportunity for plaintiffs to plan or independents to plan for 22 signature collection. There was a reduced submission period 23 for independent candidates by 50 percent. And every day in the 24 signature collection period, social distancing mandates were in 25 effect, with enforcement by towns and municipalities.

K7RVEISO

1 The New York pause 10-point plan clearly says to avoid 2 activities when they come into close contact with other people.
3 And all of this was in effect during the independent candidate 4 signature collection process and continues to be. We just 5 don't believe there's a rational basis for such discrepancies.

6 With that, your Honor, I'm happy to answer any kind of 7 questions.

8 One thing I will also note though, it is arguable that 9 notaries are able to gather signatures remotely for candidates.
10 The governor lifted the notary requirement that there be 11 in-person notarization. It is somewhat unclear under the 12 election law whether notaries would be able to do that in this 13 context.

14 The petitioning process, there are two lines on ballot
15 petition forms, one for subscribing witnesses, one for notaries
16 public. A subscribing witness is only -- in a party primary, 17 for instance, is only able to collect signatures if they 18 remember that party. And once they collect signatures for one 19 candidate, they cannot collect signatures for any other 20 candidate, no matter what. Notaries public, on the other hand, 21 are able to collect and witness signatures regardless.

22 It is somewhat unclear by the executive order, but 23 when the governor issued an executive order lifting the 24 requirements that notaries witness signatures in person, it 25 sort of remains to be seen whether (inaudible) flagged in this

K7RVEISO

1 election context.

2 So what we would ask, your Honor, is that with regard 3 to specific remedies that we would apply to the notary -- the 4 ability of a notary to gather signatures, no matter whether 5 they gather before, and remotely, and have that apply to 6 subscribing witnesses as well.

7 We would also ask, with respect to potential remedies 8 here, for an additional eight days to collect signatures for 9 independent candidates, until August 7th. That's a reduction 10 from 43 days, under the statute, to 38 days. And this 11 reduction represents the same 12 percent reduction in 12 collection days provided to major party candidates; whereas 13 independents are going from 43 to 38, major party candidates 14 went from 25 to 22 days.

15 Your Honor, for a 70 percent reduction in 16 signatures -- can you hear me, your Honor?

17 THE COURT: I hear you.

18 MR. TYRRELL: I'm sorry.

19 We'd ask for a 70 percent reduction in signatures, 20 which means that congressional candidates -- Mr. Eisen would 21 need to -- would be required to gather 1,050 signatures; and 22 Mr. Greenberg would be required, as a state senate candidate, 23 to gather 900 signatures. We would ask for remote -- for the 24 remote witnessing, like I said, as well.

25 With that, I'd be happy to answer any of the Court's

K7RVEISO

1 questions.

2 THE COURT: Well, one question that I did have is 3 what's going on before Judge Hubert in state court? The 4 motions are pending, motion to dismiss your amended petition is 5 pending, and there has been no ruling by the judge; correct?

6 MR. TYRRELL: There's been no ruling by the judge.

7 Mr. Eisen requested -- and I believe we discussed this 8 during the conference a couple weeks back. Mr. Eisen requested 9 mandamus relief requiring the board of elections to allow 10 electronic signatures. That case did not touch on any kind of, 11 sort of, constitutional issues; did not touch on the executive 12 order. It also did not touch on the executive order.

13 As far as the status of it, that's correct, there's -- 14 a motion to dismiss is pending. And it's -- you know, 15 Mr. Eisen has separate lawyers handling that case.

16 THE COURT: No, and I appreciate that.

17 I understand the timing, and I get the nature of the 18 action that you've commenced. I was just curious if there's 19 anything else going on.

20 Okay. Mr. Farber.

21 MR. FARBER: Thank you, your Honor.

22 Your Honor, may it please the Court, Seth Farber of 23 the Attorney General's Office for the defendants.

24 When we last convened on our telephone conference on 25 the 17th, the Court focused on two critical issues, and I'd

K7RVEISO

1 like to focus on them now.

2 One was the burden of proof applicable to the present 3 motion for preliminary injunction; and the other was the 4 factual question of how many signatures Plaintiff Eisen had 5 obtained by that date.

6 As to the burden of proof, actually, both parties 7 agree that in the present case, because plaintiffs seek a 8 mandatory injunction, changing the status quo with respect to 9 governmental action and policy and the preliminary injunction 10 would probably constitute the ultimate relief in the case.
11 This motion is subject to a heightened standard. Plaintiff 12 must make a clear showing of entitlement on all the elements of 13 preliminary injunction.

14 As to the other question, at the time on the 17th, 15 plaintiffs' counsel candidly answered the Court by stating that 16 Plaintiff Eisen had obtained around 1,000 signatures. I 17 observed that we were around halfway through the petition 18 inquiry then, and that was around halfway through the -- 19 halfway of the signatures needed.

20 At the moment, we have no additional information at 21 all as to how many signatures Plaintiff Greenberg has; and we 22 have no further information as to whether Mr. Eisen has 23 obtained another thousand signatures, another 2,000 signatures, 24 no signatures.

25 The question for this hearing, as raised by the Court,

K7RVEISO

1 persists: Have the plaintiffs met their heightened burden of 2 proof to obtain the extraordinary relief of mandatory 3 injunction against the government. I would have hoped that we 4 could address the question with further evidence from the 5 plaintiffs, establishing their specific efforts to obtain 6 signatures: How much time they had to put in themselves; how 7 many volunteers were dispatched; what efforts they undertook;
8 whether either or both plaintiffs relied on paid campaign staff 9 to canvass for signatures; when they started; what did they try 10 on social media; did they do direct mail, telephone, newspaper 11 advertising, personal solicitations at supermarkets and 12 shopping centers. And with all these efforts, how many 13 signatures have they obtained to date?

14 Unfortunately, none of this is before the Court. Even 15 the 1,000 figure that Mr. Tyrrell provided last time was just 16 ipse dixit; it is not evidence.

17 So what we have are two categories of documentary 18 evidence that the plaintiffs have offered in their three 19 declarations. They've offered evidence about the difficulties 20 associated with the coronavirus in New York. And we have 21 plaintiffs' carefully worded accounts of their difficulties in 22 gathering signatures. I had no doubt that everyone in this 23 room, probably in this state, and probably in this country -- 24 if not the world -- are aware of how devastating the 25 coronavirus has been to date. So this isn't really in play.

K7RVEISO

1 The problem for plaintiffs is that their presentation
2 doesn't meet their evidentiary burden, let alone the heightened 3 burden. No one disputes that getting petitioners -- petition 4 signatures now is challenging in the best of times, and 5 obviously more challenging than if we were not in this 6 pandemic.

7 Defendants offered the declaration of Todd Valentine 8 of the state board of elections for the purpose of 9 demonstrating that despite plaintiffs' protestations, there are 10 means consistent with social distancing and health and safety 11 measures by which they can obtain signatures. It is undisputed 12 that all the regions in which the plaintiffs are seeking 13 petitions are in phase IV. Defendants do not dispute that this 14 does not mean normal or business as usual; but it does mean a 15 vast improvement in terms of the amount of committed business 16 activity compared to just a few weeks ago, especially in March 17 and April, when we were at the height of this pandemic.

18 So the question before the Court is not whether the 19 executive order 202.46 and its reduction of signature 20 requirements by 30 percent makes signature gathering easy or is 21 the ideal number in a perfect world. The question is whether 22 it is so burdensome on these plaintiffs as to be 23 unconstitutional. On this record, the answer is no.

24 I note that Plaintiff Eisen uses carefully worded 25 statements in his declaration:

K7RVEISO

1 It is more likely that voters residing in the 17th
2 district will refuse to open doors to my petition circulators
3 and me; or members of the public are reluctant to participate 4 in the conversations necessary to facilitate petition signing, 5 let alone actually perform the physical act of signing.

6 This, however, is not evidence; it's conjecture.

7 For his part, Mr. Greenberg at least offers the active 8 voice and states: Since July 1st, I have worked tirelessly to 9 gather the signatures required for independent candidate ballot
10 access in New York State Senate District 46, in listing over 35 11 volunteers and friends and family to circulate my nominating 12 petitions.

13 And for his part, again, more directly than Mr. Eisen, 14 Mr. Greenberg states: Members of the public have consistently 15 refused to sign my petition sheets for fear of contracting 16 COVID-19, as people refuse to answer their doors, touch pens
17 used to sign my petitions, or allow strangers to approach them 18 altogether. And adds for emphasis: Virtually every individual 19 who has refused to sign my petition sheets has asked if he or 20 she is able to sign electronically or do virtual witnessing in 21 order to avoid any exposure to COVID-19.

22 Aside from potential hearsay problems with those 23 statements, we don't know if those statements were made to 24 Mr. Greenberg or his volunteers. But even if that wasn't an 25 issue, we're still missing a critical fact: How many people

K7RVEISO

1 were involved in those statements? Was that one member of the 2 public, 10, 100, 1,000? Well, we don't know and we're not 3 going to know, because none of this is in the record.

4 Further, Mr. Greenberg does not tell us how many of 5 these people said this with respect to his current independent 6 run, or said it with respect to his previous effort to obtain 7 the democratic nomination, as reflected in his letter to the 8 governor.

9 These are open questions that we cannot answer from 10 this record and, as such, they are fatal to show a likelihood 11 of success on the merits as to whether or not it is virtually 12 impossible to obtain signatures to obtain a place on the 13 ballot.

14 We would argue that it's also fatal to the equal 15 protection claim as absent a compelling evidentiary showing of 16 current difficulties, entirely absent from this record, it's 17 impossible to ascertain if plaintiffs' suggested comparators -- 18 that would be candidates seeking party nominations last 19 March -- are equal in all relevant respects as compared to the 20 plaintiffs here.

21 The district court in the Connecticut case of Gottlieb 22 v. Lamont, which has been cited by all parties here, asked very 23 similar questions on the record before it, and came to the 24 conclusion that this does not meet the burden of proof in a 25 case raising similar issues. And in this case, where plaintiff

K7RVEISO

1 bears a heightened burden, we submit that this is a fundamental 2 failure of proof that warrants denial of the motion.

3 Similarly, plaintiffs have failed to meet their 4 heightened burden on the other elements of the claim. They 5 argue that merely raising a First Amendment issue is enough to 6 constitutionally show irreparable harm, but they haven't shown 7 a First Amendment violation. Plaintiffs are still permitted to 8 use all means of speech to obtain signatures to get on the 9 ballot. Neither of their district is under a stay-at-home 10 order.

11 And while no one questions that COVID-19 is a 12 concern -- and a deadly serious concern -- with all due 13 respect, their rights to engage in obtaining signatures and 14 obtain valid access has not been so impaired by actions of the 15 state to result in the virtual impossibility of their obtaining 16 a place on the ballot. They have not met the heightened 17 standard for showing irreparable harm.

18 Similarly, plaintiffs contend that balancing of 19 equities in the public interest favors them because their 20 interests of getting on the ballot and giving the voting public 21 the choice of their candidacies and obtaining this Court's 22 relief to obtain any of the three methods they propose:
23 Lowering the signature requirement, extending the petitioning
24 period, or permitting electronic signature gathering 25 verification, outbalances the state's interests in avoiding

K7RVEISO

1 ballot cast and voter confusion in establishing a minimal 2 threshold of public support.

3 We can infer that plaintiffs believe that their 4 interests outweigh those of the state. But the state offered 5 Mr. Valentine's declaration for the proposition that at least 6 two of those three remedies, as suggested by the plaintiffs, 7 would actually work extraordinary hardship on the state
8 defendants, especially as a result of the compressed time 9 involved.

10 Plaintiffs don't dispute that the September 9th ballot 11 certification date is a hard deadline. Ballot lineups have to 12 be ready by then to ensure ballot preparation in time for both 13 early voting and the general election. Either remedy suggested 14 by plaintiff -- adding an electronic option or literally 15 extending the additional period -- will, in turn, cause delays 16 in the remainder of the process, and will take critical time.
17 Because between now and September 9th is when all ballot 18 challenges have to be brought and adjudicated; and then 19 litigation, through appeal, up to the State Court of Appeals, 20 resolves in about six -- five or six weeks. This is already 21 many weeks shorter than the normal time, which would have run 22 from about May, and realistically cannot be shortened further 23 without causing extreme disruption of this election.

24 Again, the Connecticut district court in Gottlieb 25 noted the state's critical interest maintaining its electoral

K7RVEISO

1 schedule, in light of other obligations associated with ballot 2 information and distribution. And similarly, adding an 3 electronic option would create the necessity for further delay 4 as the state figured out how to implement it.

5 On the record before this Court, the plaintiffs have 6 failed to meet their heightened burden; they have not made a 7 clear showing of entitlement to preliminary injunction here, 8 and their motion should be denied.

9 If your Honor has no further questions of me, thank 10 you.

11 THE COURT: Thank you.

12 I want to ask both of you -- I guess we left off in 13 our last telephone conference, everything has been as expedited 14 as my calendar has permitted. I asked both of you to consider 15 if there was a resolution here, short of the judge ruling. And 16 I haven't heard anything about that this morning.

17 So either of you or both of you, have you engaged, as 18 I requested, in a good-faith discussion about how to resolve 19 this, short of the judge ruling on plaintiffs' application for 20 a preliminary injunction?

21 MR. TYRRELL: Yes. Yes, your Honor, we did have a 22 discussion. Unfortunately, there was not followup from the 23 state, but there was a discussion about potential settlement.
24 It was largely with respect to a reduction in signatures. And 25 last that I heard from the state was that Mr. Farber was going

K7RVEISO

1 to consult with his colleagues to discuss that, but I had not 2 heard back yet.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 Mr. Farber?

5 MR. FARBER: That's essentially correct, your Honor.

6 We have not -- I don't know how to characterize it, 7 whether I haven't made the sale, but we have -- we have not 8 been able to reach further basis for -- we have not been able 9 to reach an agreement, is how I will put it, your Honor.

10 THE COURT: Have you discussed the settlement proposal 11 with the "client"?

12 MR. FARBER: Yes, your Honor.

13 THE COURT: And your client has no interest in 14 pursuing the settlement proposal.

15 MR. FARBER: No, your Honor.

16 THE COURT: All right.

17 You have nothing else, Mr. Farber?

18 MR. FARBER: I do not, your Honor.

19 THE COURT: You have nothing else.

20 The record is very clear here.

21 Okay. We're going to take a few-minute recess, and 22 I'll be back out momentarily.

23 The timing of this, I assume, is -- from your point of 24 view, Mr. Tyrrell, one way or the other, you need to know where 25 you stand. And so ordinarily what I would do, frankly, is I

K7RVEISO

1 would take everything on submission and I would write an 2 opinion on this very important issue. And I don't know whether 3 that's something that helps you or hurts you, but I'm assuming 4 that however this shakes out, you need to know as soon as I can 5 give you an answer as to what's going on; correct?

6 MR. TYRRELL: That's correct, your Honor.

7 The sooner, the better, to have some sort of 8 expectations for our client would be -- the sooner, the better, 9 would be great.

10 THE COURT: And I just want to be also clear that 11 there's no witnesses coming from either side. I gave you the 12 opportunity, I set aside the day. We had no witnesses from the 13 defendant, correct, and none from the plaintiffs. So, okay.

14 Correct?

15 MR. FARBER: Yes, your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Correct?

17 MR. TYRRELL: Correct. Correct.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 We'll stand in recess for a few minutes, and I'll be 20 back.

21 (Recess)

22 THE LAW CLERK: We're back on the record.

23 THE COURT: First of all, I want to say how much I 24 appreciate the ardor with which counsel has presented their 25 arguments to me. As a new judge, I'm remarkably pleased each

K7RVEISO

1 and every time I run into competent counsel who care deeply 2 about their issues and may disagree with each other, but 3 nevertheless have a very strong sense of obligation to the 4 Court -- albeit from an adversarial point of view -- to educate 5 me on what it is I need to know. So I appreciate both of you, 6 all of you, for your good hard work.

7 By way of background, there is a state court action 8 that was commenced April 20th, 2020 entitled Eisen v. Cuomo
9 Index 54542 of 2020 in Westchester County Supreme Court.
10 There -- though the plaintiffs here -- sought temporary relief 11 from Judge Hubert, who actually declined to sign plaintiffs' 12 order to show cause concerning reductions in number of 13 signatures and the nature of the signature being electronic.

14 Respondents there filed a motion to dismiss the 15 petition May 18th. Petitioner then filed an amended pleading 16 on June 3rd, and respondents replied on June 10th. Thereafter, 17 the respondents wrote advising the issuance of Executive Order 18 202.46 on July 8th.

19 This action, the action before me, was commenced on 20 July 3rd, 2020. On July 7th, I granted pro hac vice admission 21 to plaintiffs' counsel.

22 On July 17th, 2020, an order to show cause was signed 23 by me, with an expedited briefing schedule in scheduling a 24 hearing for 10 a.m. today. Service was effectuated by ICF, and 25 opposition was received by ICF on the 23rd -- on the 21st of

K7RVEISO

1 July, and a reply on the 23rd at 5 p.m.

2 We adjusted the dates along the way, and all briefs
3 were filed by July 24th. An amended complaint was filed by the 4 plaintiff on July 20th, and adding an additional Plaintiff
5 Greenberg to this case.

6 The action in its present amended complaint form 7 involves two plaintiffs: One running for the congressional 8 seat in the 17th congressional district, and another running 9 for the New York State Senate seat in district 46.

10 The amended complaint includes two claims for relief, 11 each pursuant to 42 U.S.C., Section 1983.

12 The first claim for relief is an alleged violation of 13 the First and Fourteenth Amendment; and the second claim for 14 relief is a violation alleged to be the equal protection clause 15 of the Fourteenth Amendment.

16 Claims for relief center on the content of Executive 17 Order 202.46, signed by Governor Cuomo on June 30th, 2020, and 18 Election Law Section 6-140.

19 Executive Order 202, as it relates to nominations by 20 independent candidates, requires two things which plaintiffs 21 find offensive and suggest they are unconstitutional.

22 First -- and I'm quoting from 202.46: "A signature
23 made earlier than July 1, 2020, or later than July 30, 2020, 24 shall not be counted upon a petition for an independent 25 nomination for an office appearing on the general election

K7RVEISO

1 ballot or at a village election."

2 The second item reads: "For any election in 2020, the 3 signature requirements on an independent nominating petition 4 for an independent nomination for the general election for any 5 office that is not determined by a statewide election shall 6 be -- " and then I'm skipping some language -- "a number equal 7 to 70 percent of the statutory number provided for by 8 subdivision 2 of Section 6-142 of the election law.

9 In addition, plaintiffs take issue with the 10 requirement under New York Election Law, Section 6-140(1)(a) 11 and (b), that the signatures of supporters and witnesses be in 12 ink.

13 For Plaintiff Eisen, he must obtain, according to the 14 papers before me, 2,450 signatures, for approximately .536 15 percent of the 456,834 voters in the 17th congressional 16 district in New York.

17 Plaintiff Greenberg, he must obtain 2100 signatures, 18 or 1.1 percent of the 190,347 voters in the 46th senate
19 district in New York.

20 Before me today is plaintiffs' application for a 21 preliminary injunction. I scheduled the hearing for the day, 22 and have heard now from counsel for both sides summarizing that 23 which is set forth in their motion papers and papers in 24 opposition. Neither side had any witnesses.

25 Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction seeks an

K7RVEISO

1 order to enjoin defendants during the pendency of this action
2 "from enforcing New York's current ballot qualification
3 requirements for independent candidates for Congress [and I
4 resume the New York Senate] pursuant to New York's election 5 law, Section 6-100 et seq., and Executive Order 202.46."

6 Plaintiffs' application raises a number of substantive 7 and procedural issues which are significant. Both sides argue 8 that on this application for preliminary injunction, and 9 because the nature of the preliminary injunction sought is 10 mandatory, there is a heightened standard for the plaintiff to 11 make a "clear" showing of entitlement to the relief requested.
12 People of the State of New York ex rel. Schneiderman v.
13 Actavis, PLC, 787 F.3d 638, 650 (2d Cir. 2015).

14 The appropriate standard of a review for preliminary 15 injunction includes recognition that a preliminary injunction 16 is an extraordinary and drastic remedy, one that should not be 17 granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, carries the 18 burden of persuasion. To obtain a preliminary injunction, 19 plaintiff must demonstrate irreparable injury absent injunctive 20 relief, either a likelihood of success on the merits or a 21 serious question going to the merits to make them fair ground 22 for trial, with a balance of hardships decidedly tipping in the 23 plaintiffs' favor, and that the public interest weighs in favor 24 of granting an injunction.

25 The Court will first consider the likelihood of

K7RVEISO

1 success on the merits of plaintiffs' two claims for relief.

2 Plaintiffs' first claim for relief involves analysis
3 of the ballot access rules under 202.46, and Election Law
4 Section 6-140(a) and (b).

5 Plaintiffs contend that because of the restrictions
6 put in place in response to COVID-19, ballot access rules set 7 forth as I've indicated are unconstitutional.

8 The administration of the electoral process is a 9 matter that the Constitution largely entrusts to the state.
10 The Supreme Court has clearly stated that election laws may so 11 impinge upon freedom of association to run afoul of the First 12 and Fourteenth Amendment if they are unduly restricted. And 13 that's Kusper v. Pontikes, 414 U.S. 51, 57 (1973). That 14 prohibition includes state laws governing which candidates may 15 appear on a ballot, including primary ballots.

16 Ballot access laws place burdens on two different -- 17 although overlapping -- types of rights. The right of the 18 individuals to associate for the advancement of political 19 beliefs, and the right of qualifying voters -- regardless of 20 their political persuasion -- to cast their votes effectively.
21 That's recognized in the Supreme Court decision of Williams v.
22 Rhodes, 393 U.S. 23, 30-31 (1968).

23 There's no litmus test here that will separate valid 24 ballot access provisions from invalid ones; instead, courts 25 conduct the two-step analysis that derives from Anderson v.

K7RVEISO

1 Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780 (1983), and Burdick v. Takushi, 504
2 U.S. 428 (1992), and being the Second Circuit has recently -- 3 and thankfully -- described in detail the test, the two-part 4 test in Yang v. Kosinski, 960 F.3d, 119 (2d Cir. 2020).

5 The Second Circuit has articulated the test this way:

6 "First, we ascertain the extent to which the challenge 7 restriction burdens the exercise of the speech and 8 associational rights at stake. The restriction could qualify 9 as reasonable and nondiscriminatory, or as severe.

10 "Once we have resolved this first question, we proceed 11 to a second step, in which we apply one or another pertinent 12 legal standard to the restriction. If the restriction is 13 reasonable and nondiscriminatory, we apply a standard that has 14 come to be known as the Anderson-Burdick balancing test.

15 "We must first consider the character and magnitude of 16 the asserted injury to the rights protected by the First and 17 Fourteenth Amendments that the plaintiff seeks to vindicate;
18 and then identify and evaluate the precise interest put forward 19 by the state as justifications for the burdens imposed.

20 "If the restriction is severe, then we are required to 21 apply the more familiar test of strict scrutiny. Whether the 22 challenged restriction is narrowly drawn to advance the state 23 interest of compelling importance, it follows then that the 24 rigorousness of our inquiry into the propriety of the state 25 election law depends upon the extent to which a challenged

K7RVEISO

1 restriction burdens the First and Fourteenth Amendment rights."

2 As to the first step, the Anderson-Burdick test
3 requires the Court to analyze the burden on plaintiffs' rights.

4 The hallmark of a severe burden is exclusion or virtual 5 exclusion from the ballot. Libertarian Party of Kentucky v.
6 Grimes, 835 F.3d 570, 574 (6th Cir. 2016).

7 I, therefore, turn to the two-step analysis required
8 by the Yang case.

9 With respect to Step 1, I believe the plaintiff has 10 failed to demonstrate clearly that obtaining the signatures is 11 impossible or virtually impossible to obtain. For the 12 Plaintiff Eisen to comply, he needs .536 percent of the 456,834 13 voters in the 17th congressional district, for approximately 82
14 signatures a day. The 17th congressional district is in phase 15 IV of the governor's reopening plan, and Eisen has failed to 16 offer any proof on this score, other than conclusory 17 generalities and self-serving broad statements of fact.

18 Plaintiff Greenberg fares no better. He needs 1.1 19 percent of 190,347 voters in his 46th district, or 20 approximately 70 signatures a day.

21 In either case, there is no proof in this record as to 22 how many signatures each plaintiff has actually obtained. They 23 also fail, each plaintiff, to state more than generally, or 24 carefully worded statements, what efforts that they have 25 engaged in to attempt to collect the signatures, or whether

K7RVEISO

1 other independent candidates have met the signature
2 requirement. There was no proof before me that such a number 3 of signatures was impossible or virtually impossible to obtain.

4 There is no question that COVID-19 has undoubtedly 5 made plaintiffs' efforts much more difficult. The governor's 6 executive order 202.46 has significantly eased the burden on 7 each of these independent candidates. Therefore, I find the 8 restrictions are reasonable and nondiscriminatory.

9 Having determined that the restrictions are not 10 severe, but reasonable and nondiscriminatory, the Court is 11 required to consider the balancing test under Anderson-Burdick, 12 a balance between plaintiffs' asserted First Amendment 13 injuries, against the precise interests put forward by the 14 state as justifications for the burdens imposed, just what Yang 15 v. Kosinski, 960 F.3d at 129 (2d Cir. 2020) requires.

16 Under this test then, the state's reasonable and 17 nondiscriminatory restriction will be generally sufficient to 18 uphold the provisions if they serve important state interests.

19 For their part, plaintiffs generally point to the 20 COVID-19 pandemic's impact on the process, and how the 21 legislatures in other states, such as Florida, New Jersey, 22 Utah, Minnesota, Michigan, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and 23 Maryland, have eliminated some or all of these requirements.
24 Plaintiffs claim that these restrictions unnecessarily burden
25 plaintiffs' First Amendment right of individuals to associate

K7RVEISO

1 for the advancement of political beliefs, and the right of 2 qualified voters, regardless of their political persuasion, to 3 cast votes effectively. They cite Williams v. Rhodes, 390 U.S.
4 at 30 (1968).

5 Defendants argue that these ballot restrictions are 6 plainly constitutional. Defendants maintain they have strong 7 interests in assuring that there is a modicum of public support 8 for independent candidacy, and substantial regulation of 9 elections if they are to be fair, honest, and orderly.

10 I find that 202.46 actually reduces the valid burdens
11 on plaintiffs and does not further restrict plaintiffs. Were I 12 to enjoin and suspend any of the requirements plaintiffs seek 13 suspended, the state's legitimate interest in an orderly 14 election process in determining that there is public support 15 for independent candidates could be jeopardized.

16 Plaintiffs' argument that their own interests in 17 obtaining a place on the ballot outweigh the state's interests 18 in overseeing its election process, ensuring the public support 19 for these plaintiffs is simply, in my view, wrong. As to the 20 first claim for relief, plaintiffs have failed to make a clear 21 showing of likelihood of success.

22 Analysis of plaintiffs' second claim for relief on 23 equal protection fares no better.

24 To state a claim for relief under the equal protection 25 clause, plaintiffs must allege:

K7RVEISO

1 One, there is an intentional discrimination by the 2 state adopting the rule which is facially neutral, but has a 3 discriminatory effect; or by applying a facially neutral policy 4 in a discriminatory manner.

5 To establish intentional discrimination, plaintiffs 6 must allege and show there are similarly situated persons 7 having been treated differently. Gagliardi v. The Village of 8 Pawling, 18 F.3d 188, 193 (2d Cir. 1994).

9 Plaintiffs argue that Executive Order 202.46 treats
10 independent candidates different from major party candidates.
11 For example, independent candidates got a 30 percent reduction 12 in signature requirements, whereas major party candidates got a 13 70 percent reduction. Major party candidates got an extra 11 14 days -- or a 12 percent reduction -- to collect signatures; and 15 independent candidates did not get any.

16 Independent candidates were notified on June 30th of 17 the requirements commencing on July 1st. During the signature 18 collection for major party candidates, there was no social 19 distancing; whereas for independent candidates, they had social 20 distancing requirements during the entire time.

21 These arguments simply do not meet the requirement for 22 clear showing of likelihood of success. Simply put, Executive 23 Order 202.46 treats all independent candidates equally. And 24 the Second Circuit has clearly found that differential
25 treatment under New York law between ballot signature

K7RVEISO

1 requirements for independent candidates and party-nominated 2 candidates is simply not an equal protection violation. Kunz
3 v. New York State Senate, 113 F.3d 326, 328 (2d Cir. 1997).
4 Also, Ruston v. Town Board for the Town of Skaneateles, 610
5 F.3d 55, 59-60, (2d Cir. 2010). There is simply no similarly 6 situated comparator which creates a likelihood of success on 7 plaintiffs' second claim for relief.

8 Having found no likelihood of success on both claims 9 for relief, the motion for a preliminary injunction is denied.

10 I have a few additional points I believe are 11 appropriate to complete my decision, first with respect to 12 irreparable injury.

13 While I recognize that under certain circumstances an 14 assertion of a First Amendment and/or a Fourteenth Amendment 15 loss may create a presumption of irreparable injury, here I 16 find no such presumption because there's no clear showing of a 17 constitutional violation, making the claim of irreparable 18 injury, therefore, in my mind, remote and speculative.

19 With respect to the balance of equities, the balance 20 of equities, in my view, do not clearly tip in plaintiffs' 21 favor. The state has strong interests in assuring adequate 22 support for independent candidates, maintaining its regulatory 23 election scheme, avoiding voter confusion and valid potential 24 chaos.

25 Indeed, were I to issue an injunction as plaintiffs

K7RVEISO

1 have sought, there would be severe problems in the 2 administrative and judicial challenges period already 3 statutorily in place leading up to the September 9th hard date 4 referred to this morning in the November 3rd election.

5 The relief sought by these plaintiffs is ultimate.
6 Just comparing the order to show cause to the wherefore close 7 in the amended complaint makes that point. This is simply not 8 one of those rarest of situations where ultimate relief should 9 be given at the preliminary injunction stage.

10 Finally, I note that I also have a real concern that 11 because there is a state court action pending which seeks the 12 same relief as to the number of signatures, or signature 13 requirement being original as opposed to electronic, there's a 14 possibility that a ruling by me could end up in conflict with 15 the state court judge. In any event, and for all the reasons 16 indicated, plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction is 17 denied.

18 Okay. That's my ruling.

19 What we need to do now is consider the next steps.

20 The amended complaint was filed on July 20th. My 21 rules require that before you move or seek permission to move 22 on any basis, we need to have a conference. I don't know 23 whether the state intends to move to dismiss.

24 And I should say, frankly, I'm denying this 25 preliminary injunction, but it has nothing whatsoever to do

K7RVEISO

1 with my separate obligation to consider by a preponderance of 2 the evidence the claims of constitutional law violations. So 3 while I'm ruling today in an expedited fashion on a motion for 4 preliminary injunction by discharging my obligation in 5 considering a clear showing, that has nothing whatsoever to do 6 with the trial on the merits here and the burden of proof 7 associated therewith.

8 So I'd like to hear from you, Mr. Farber. Are you 9 intending to file an answer, in which case we'll get a 10 discovery order in place, or do you want to move to dismiss?
11 Do you know yet what you are doing?

12 MR. FARBER: We do not. We do not know yet, your 13 Honor.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. FARBER: We will probably consider that very 16 quickly. But at the moment I --

17 THE COURT: Okay. As I get it, the complaint was 18 filed on July 20th; so you have plenty of time within which to 19 address the issue. I'd ask you to consult my rules. They are 20 pretty precise and straightforward.

21 Okay. When I get back to chambers, I will issue an 22 order denying the motion for the reasons set forth in the 23 extremely well-handled transcript by our court reporter, who 24 I'm certain got every word, as she always does.

25 All right. Anything else?

K7RVEISO

MR. FARBER: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.
