CASE NO. 5:20-cv-05799-LHK

PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE TO COURT'S RULING ORDERING
DEFENDANTS TO SHOW CAUSE
[DKT. 392]

Place: Courtroom 8
Judge: Hon. Lucy H. Koh

1 Defendants' Response to the Court's Order to Show Cause says nothing about the core 2 question at issue: how is it possible, in light of Defendants' own statements and the multiple 3 Court rulings in this case, that all of Defendants' privilege claims (whether in the tens of 4 thousands or some smaller subset of thousands) are going to be bulked together for Plaintiffs and 5 given en masse on December 21—with the Judges only being provided access the evening of 6 December 23? That is because there is only one answer. Self-help. It is now nearing 7pm on 7 Friday, December 18, and Defendants have not provided a single privilege log entry to Plaintiffs 8 regarding the claimed 85,000+ documents they have identified in this case as potentially 9 responsive. That includes as to the ~60,000 documents transmitted on Monday evening, which 10 Defendants themselves aptly indicate is a dump of "a veritable truckload of documents," Dkt.
11 394 at 6, as well as the additional ~8,000 documents produced over the last few days, and the 12 ~25,000 potentially privileged subset Defendants have been reviewing for some time.

13 If Defendants were truly working to comply with the Judges' multiple discovery orders 14 over the last few days—and their own prior statements to the Court, and promises to Plaintiffs—15 they would have produced some privilege log entries by now. They have not, and they have 16 ignored Plaintiffs' attempts at yet another compromise solution. Dkt. 389. Deliberate defiance, 17 in the face of threatened waiver of privilege, is an embrace of that waiver. Plaintiffs respectfully 18 request that—with respect to all of the potentially responsive documents Defendants have 19 identified and reviewed or are reviewing to date—the Court find Defendants to have waived all 20 privileges in connection with the documents responsive to Plaintiffs' pending document requests 21 and those ordered produced by Judge Koh.

22 I. BACKGROUND ON DISCOVERY DISPUTES

23 Plaintiffs have been trying to work with Defendants for over a month on what should 24 have been a basic and straightforward task: Defendants' response to 22 limited requests for 25 production (RFPs) served on November 17, half of which RFPs were sufficient to show requests 26 on basic census metrics and processes. At nearly every turn, Plaintiffs have been stymied. And 27 as of last week, there was simply no time to wait longer, because Defendants had produced a 28 mere 691 documents—mostly old, and mostly duplicates—that were largely irrelevant to the

1 current and core issues in the case. And a month is fully half of the extremely truncated 2-month 2 fact discovery period in this case.

3 Thus, on Wednesday December 9, Plaintiffs were forced to file a motion to compel.
4 Defendants filed an aggressive opposition in response, laughing off Plaintiffs’ concerns and 5 repeated attempts to meet and confer, instead claiming that Plaintiffs’ false “incredulity,” and 6 “remarkable strategy” of “gamesmanship and intentional flouting of the agreed-upon schedule,” 7 “should not be rewarded.” Dkt. 371 at 1. The Court granted Plaintiffs’ motion to compel on 8 December 10 (Dkt. 372), and then denied Defendants’ motion for reconsideration on December 9 13. Dkt. 380. Defendants then filed a motion for a protective order regarding a Rule 30(b)(6) 10 deposition on December 16, which was also denied (Dkt. 387), and a motion for 502(d) order on 11 December 17, which was just recently denied without prejudice (Dkt. 399).

12 As the docket for the last 9 days in this case shows, Defendants have spent a significant 13 amount of time and energy in first refusing to respond to Plaintiffs’ straightforward document 14 requests, and then in trying to limit as much as possible their discovery obligations. What they 15 have not done is use that energy to provide any privilege logs regarding their claimed 80,000+ 16 documents they have identified as potentially privileged and responsive—notwithstanding their 17 own representations, and the Court’s orders on this very issue.

18 II. DEFENDANTS VIOLATED THIS COURT’S ORDER REGARDING PRIVILEGE
19 LOG PRODUCTIONS, WHICH WAS BASED ON DEFENDANTS’ OWN
20 STATEMENTS

21 Plaintiffs have made several attempts to work with Defendants on a reasonable schedule 22 for production of a privilege log and resolution of privilege disputes, to no avail. During the 23 December 14 meet and confer with Plaintiffs and in the Joint Statement Re: Privilege Log and 24 Privilege Disputes (“Joint Statement”) (Dkt. 382), Defendants stated that they would provide a 25 December 14 privilege log. Joint Statement at 2; Plaintiffs’ Statement Re: Privilege Logs 26 (“Plaintiffs’ Statement”) (Dkt. 389) at 1. That log, and the additional privilege entries to be 27 provided on December 17, were to form the basis for the first of two “privilege reviews” that 28 Plaintiffs agreed to. Dkt. 382. The Court relied on that representation in crafting its Order On Further Procedures For In Camera Review Of Documents On Privilege Logs (“Order on

1 Privilege Procedures”) (Dkt. 382), and “set deadlines flowing from the December 14 privilege 2 log.” Order to Show Cause at 1.

3 Plaintiffs thought that was a reasonable resolution of this issue, despite the weeks of 4 delay by Defendants that had essentially forced such a truncated process. But Defendants did not 5 produce any log accompanying the December 14 production. In a December 16 meet and 6 confer, Plaintiffs informed Defendants that their failure to produce a December 14 privilege log 7 was a violation of the Joint Statement and Order on Privilege Procedures, and that Plaintiffs were 8 significantly concerned that the Magistrate Judge Panel’s Order indicated a belief that such a log 9 would have been produced. The next day, Plaintiffs went above and beyond in seeking yet 10 another reasonable resolution, and proposed to Defendants that the parties make a joint 11 submission to the Court whereby Defendants would produce a privilege log on December 17, 12 which would allow for two separate and substantial privilege log disputes to be briefed before 13 the Court. Defendants rejected that too—even though, remarkably, in the December 14 Joint 14 Statement, Defendants had agreed to just such a log.

15 There is no justification for this. Defendants’ Response To Order To Show Cause 16 (“Defendants’ Response”) (Dkt. 390) argues that they have not “allowed themselves a one-week 17 extension to serve their first privilege log,” alleging that they did not “withhold any documents” 18 from their December 14 production and instead production material that may have been eligible 19 for a privilege claim. Defendants’ Response at 1. However, in the same breath, Defendants 20 concede that when reviewing documents for their December 14 production, they “separate[ed] 21 for expedited review other material likely containing core governmental privileges.” Id. In other 22 words, Defendants set aside documents that they were likely to assert privilege over, but did not 23 review and compile any of these separated documents into a privilege log, in direct contravention 24 of Defendants’ representation in the Joint Statement and the Courts’ understanding in its Order 25 on Privilege Procedures. Defendants “made no claims of privilege in their December 14 26 production” and a log, “if served, would have been entirely blank” because, of their own accord, 27 Defendants chose to temporarily ignore “material likely containing core governmental 28 privileges.” Defendants’ Response at 1, 4. This is not a justification for an empty privilege

1 log—it simply means Defendants decided to segregate out and not conduct any privilege review 2 at all, despite their own representations and the Courts’ orders.

3 Defendants’ insistence on ignoring their responsibility to review potentially privileged 4 documents and produce a privilege log is particularly perplexing in light of the December 14 5 meet and confer and subsequent Joint Statement. As the Joint Statement discusses, Plaintiffs and 6 Defendants agreed to a schedule under which Defendants would produce a privilege log on 7 December 17, 2020. Yet upon receipt of the Court’s Order on Privilege Procedures, even though 8 Defendants were aware that they had not produced a December 14 privilege log at all (unlike the 9 Court or the Plaintiffs, who did not receive this privilege log until December 15, after the Court 10 published its Order on Privilege Procedures), Defendants apparently ceased any attempts to 11 produce a privilege log containing documents from the December 14 through December 17 12 productions.

13 III. A DETERMINATION THAT DEFENDANTS WAIVED ALL PRIVILEGES IS 14 APPROPRIATE

15 Contrary to the assertions in Defendants’ Response, a finding that Defendants have 16 waived all privileges with respect to the documents responsive to Plaintiffs’ pending documents 17 requests and those ordered produced by the Court is appropriate and warranted.

18 The Ninth Circuit has held that a party’s failure to timely produce a privilege log may 19 result in waiver of privileges, Burlington N. & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. United States District 20 Court, 408 F.3d 1142, 1149 (9th Cir. 2005), and courts “have not hesitated to find waiver where 21 a party repeatedly engages in inexcusable or unjustifiable conduct.” Porter v. City & Cty. of San 22 Francisco, No. 16-CV-03771-CW(DMR), 2018 WL 4215602, at *6 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 2018).

23 As Defendants note, the Ninth Circuit in Burlington instructed courts to apply a four 24 factor test in making a “case-by-case determination” of whether a party has waived privilege in 25 in response a request for production: (1) “the degree to which the objection or assertion of 26 privilege enables the litigant seeking discovery and the court to evaluate whether each of the 27 withheld documents is privileged”; (2) “the timeliness of the objection and accompanying 28

1 information about the withheld documents”;¹ (3) “the magnitude of the document production”; 2 and (4) “other particular circumstances of the litigation that make the responding to discovery 3 unusually easy...or unusually hard.” Burlington, 408 F.3d at 1149.

4 Here, Defendants have deliberately failed to produce any privilege log corresponding to 5 the December 14 through December 21 production, despite clear orders by the Court in its 6 Amended Order (Dkt. 380) and subsequent Orders, and Defendants’ own representations 7 regarding privilege log production. Defendants’ failure means that the Court has no ability to 8 “evaluate whether each of the [as yet to be provided] withheld documents is privileged” under 9 the first Burlington factor. Id. Additionally, the “timeliness of the objection and accompanying 10 information about the withheld documents” weighs in favor of waiver, Id.; the privilege log 11 production schedule was expressly set by the Court (Dkt. 383), and Defendants’ failure to 12 produce a privilege log in violation of the Court’s order is inherently untimely. Further, as the 13 Court stated in its Amended Order, Defendants have “fail[ed] to produce documents that 14 Defendants have been on notice about for nearly five months,” and Defendants’ failure to 15 produce a privilege log in these circumstances is particularly egregious. Amended Order at 5.

16 Where, as here, a party completely fails to produce a privilege log in the required 17 timeframe, that party’s deficient conduct is inexcusable and should result in waiver of privilege.
 18 See, e.g., Loop AI Labs Inc. v. Gatti, No. 15-CV-00798-HSG(DMR), 2016 WL 2908415, at *3 19 (N.D. Cal. May 13, 2016) (finding waiver “warranted by Plaintiff’s repeated and unjustified 20 failures to provide a timely and useable privilege log”); La Verne Firefighters Ass’n, Local 3624 21 v. City of La Verne, No. CV1708743GWAFMX, 2018 WL 6131196, at *1-3 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 5, 22 2018) (deeming privilege waived where defendant repeatedly failed to comply with court orders 23 to produce adequate privilege log). As in Burlington, where the Ninth Circuit affirmed the 24 district court’s waiver of all privileges, concluding that Defendants have waived privileges is 25 similarly appropriate. Burlington, 408 F.3d at 1150.

 27
 28 ¹ Here, where the privilege log production schedule was expressly set by the Court (Dkt. 383), defendants’ failure to produce a privilege log in violation of the Court’s order is inherently untimely.

1 Moreover, Defendants have created a situation in which it will be practically infeasible
2 for the Court or Plaintiffs to proceed under the Order on Privilege Procedures. Defendants’ 3 Response “estimate[s] that only a fraction of the 25,512 documents” they may assert privilege 4 over will appear on the December 21 privilege log; Defendants then state that “[s]ome subset” of 5 2,944 documents are potentially subject to executive privilege, and that they may also claim 6 withhold some number of an additional 1,700 documents. Defendants’ Response at 3. However, 7 Defendants make no representation that these 2,900 and 1,700 documents are the only universe
8 of documents over which Defendants may claim privilege. And Plaintiffs have received 71,522 9 documents to date from the December 14, December 16, and December 17 productions.
10 Accordingly, Plaintiffs are highly skeptical that, in the course of Defendants reviewing over 11 70,000 documents thus far, in addition to the documents Defendants will review and produce 12 between December 18 and December 21, Defendants will produce a December 21 privilege log 13 that is anything short of significantly large, with thousands of entries.

14 It is December 18, so Defendants most assuredly know whether they have thousands of 15 entries already in their “to be revealed on December 21” privilege log. Logs take time, and do 16 not spring fully-formed, as Athena, from the heads of counsel. But Defendants say nothing of 17 the actual expected volume (and of course, are closely guarding the privilege log entries they 18 currently have). Depending on the size, it may well be infeasible for Plaintiffs to sort through 19 and provide objections to such a log within 20 hours. But far more importantly, the Court will be 20 provided with briefing regarding all privilege disputes on December 23, 2020. Due to 21 Defendants’ violation of the Courts’ orders, the Magistrate Judge Panel will then have the burden 22 of sorting through likely thousands of disputed documents in a short time frame, over the 23 Holidays, particularly given the fast-moving discovery in this case. The Court should not suffer 24 the consequences of Defendants’ attempts to delay production of privilege logs.

25 In these circumstances, waiver is more than appropriate. Defendants’ position is entirely 26 of Defendants’ own, repeated conduct, and Plaintiffs and the Court should not be forced to 27 contort yet again. Plaintiffs respectfully request that—with respect to all of the potentially 28 responsive documents Defendants have identified and reviewed or are reviewing to date—the

1 Court find Defendants to have waived all privileges in connection with the documents responsive 2 to Plaintiffs' pending document requests and those ordered produced by Judge Koh. Dkts. 372, 3 380.
