SCHEDULING ORDER

Having considered the parties' Rule 26(f) report (ECF No. 121), the court now
ORDERS the following:

1. The bench trial is scheduled for September 25, 2023. Two weeks are reserved.¹
2. The deadline to complete discovery is June 2, 2023.
3. The parties' Rule 26(f) report (ECF No. 121) will control the matters it addresses, except to the extent of any conflict with this order. On matters not addressed in this order or the parties' Rule 26(f) report, the Initial Scheduling Order (ECF No. 116) remains effective.

¹ The parties requested a start date no earlier than Tuesday, September 26. The court prefers to start Monday, but if any party has an unavoidable schedule conflict, it may file an appropriate motion.

4. Each party must supplement its Rule 26 disclosures promptly after a supplement becomes necessary. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(e). Each party must supplement in time to ensure the opposing party is not prejudiced by any failure to supplement immediately after the information was (or should have been) discovered.

5. Deadlines will be determined based on this order, other applicable orders, and governing rules. Text in the clerk's docket entries are for the clerk's internal use and are not controlling.

6. A separate order for pretrial conference (to be issued later) will set a deadline for a pretrial attorney conference. That deadline will also be the deadline for Rule 26(a)(3) disclosures. The deadline to object under Rule 26(a)(3) is seven days later.

7. Any motion in limine or other pretrial motion must be filed no later than 15 days before the pretrial conference. A response to any motion in limine or other pretrial motion must be filed within the deadline set out in Local Rule 7.1(E), but must also be filed no later than five days before the pretrial conference.

SO ORDERED on December 23, 2022.
